Goats are adaptable creatures in the wild but, if kept as pets, or commercially farmed, they rely very heavily on their owners not only for food, water and shelter, but also for protection from disease or injury. This second edition has been extensively updated to include more information on current issues such as antimicrobial and anthelmintic resistance, herd health planning, and new and emerging or changing conditions such as Lyme TB. It is a clearly written, well-illustrated book and should be an invaluable, practical reference work aimed at all those who own, or care for, goats whether they be commercial goat farmers, smallholders, stock people, veterinary surgeons and students. It is written by an experienced veterinary surgeon, and its overall objective is to provide some practical advice on managing goats daily including tips on how to keep them fit and healthy, how to recognise signs of ill health, and when a veterinary surgeon needs to be consulted. A lifetime membership to the club is the prize for winning the golf match. If asked, almost all seniors will say they don't want their last home to be a nursing home. But for those who do live in a care facility, the responsibility to energize them falls primarily to the staff. Rabbi James R. Michaels and Rabbi Cary Kozberg, the editors of Flourishing In The Later Years: Jewish Pastoral Insights On Senior Residential Care, provide insights on senior residential care from Jewish and non-Jewish clinical care professionals. They share their wisdom on a variety of topics from a Jewish perspective to assist and guide team members responsible for the care of the residents living in their facility. While the focus of the book is pastoral counseling in senior residential care, its psycho-social insights into the very core of what it means to be old in our culture - whether in or out of a care facility; whether Jew or non-Jew - are invaluable. This book will be of considerable assistance to those of any spiritual background who interact with elders and to all of us as we continue along the "incredible adventure" of our own aging, making our own "voyage of discovery" into that unknown country. This book describes what has become a crisis in primary care, defines its central role, analyzes the reasons for its decline, and assesses its impacts on patients and families. A constructive approach is presented to rebuild and transform U.S. primary care with the urgent goal to address the nation's problems of access, cost, quality and equity of health care for all Americans.

A Wolf Like Me

Flourishing in the Later Years

Goats are truly one of the most adaptable and productive domesticated animals on our planet. They are found thriving in cold, mountainous areas; on warm, tropical islands; and so many places in between. They thrive on landscapes and feed on plants that challenge other animals. Domesticated thousands of years ago, goats continue to find their way into the spotlight. Goats are said to be one of the most popular small farm animals in the United States today. The reasons are many. A few dairy goats in the backyard can supply a family with nutritious and flavorful milk to drink and make into other foods. They can also provide meat from the raising and slaughtering of offspring, and manure for fertilizing gardens. Goats will eat or browse overgrown and invasive plants, cleaning up underutilized species while feeding their bodies rich nutrients. At the same time, with their smaller hoof print, agility, and selective feeding habits, goats, in limited-resource areas with sparse vegetation, can still provide for us humans. Thus the dairy goat's efficient and adaptable nature is perhaps part of a local answer for the environmental, economic, and food safety challenges we face today. Gives plain and easy to understand symptoms then goes onto the treatment with Herbal and Homeopathic Remedies. This is a effort to prevent these remedies from being lost in history. The end part of the book has a Herbal, Homeopathic and Essential Oils reference sections giving you a all in one tool for working in the field
