A mother, Mary, who didn't want her son, Joseph, to know he had a father, did everything she could to prevent anyone from talking about his father. She didn't even talk to Joseph about his father herself. But when the little boy started his preschool year, he soon found out that he must have a father because some of the other children had fathers who would bring them to the classroom and would pick them up in the afternoon. After few weeks of observation, while Joseph and his mother were walking to school, Joseph decided to ask his mother about his father. "Mommy, where's Daddy?"

"Why do the other kids have daddies?" asked Joseph

This answer hit Joseph so deeply that his behavior changed positively when his mother had another baby, a

Joseph's surrogate daddy. For many years things were

They both shared a room with a group of fatherless kids who were making their living in the neighborhood streets. Joseph and Sam ended up in juvenile correction and their mother had to bail them out. After their release, they went back to school. Joseph became a lawyer, serving kids at risk, and Sam became the owner of a construction company.
