An exploration of
why we play video

fact that we are

unhappy when we fail at them. We may think of video games

as being "fun," but in The Art of
Failure, Jesper Juul
claims that this is almost entirely mistaken. When we
play video games,
our facial
expressions are rarely those of
happiness or bliss.

Instead, we frown,
grimace, and shout
in frustration as we lose, or die, or fail to advance to the next level. Humans may have a fundamental desire to succeed

and feel competent,
but game players
choose to engage in an activity in which they are nearly certain to fail and feel incompetent. So

why do we play
video games even though they make us
unhappy? Juul

examines this paradox. In video games, as in tragic
works of art,
literature, theater,

and cinema, it seems that we want to experience
unpleasantness even if we also dislike it.

Reader or audience
reaction to tragedy is often explained as catharsis, as a
purging of negative
emotions. But, Juul
points out, this

doesn't seem to be the case for video
game players.

A Seminar, 2nd

Training's 7 Step

Games do not purge
us of unpleasant
emotions; they

produce them in the first place. What,
then, does failure in
video game playing do? Juul argues that failure in a game is

unique in that when you fail in a game,
you (not a character)
are in some way

inadequate. Yet
games also motivate

us to play more, in order to escape that inadequacy, and the feeling of escaping
failure (often by improving skills) is a

central enjoyment of games. Games,
writes Juul, are the art of failure: the singular art form that sets us up for failure
and allows us to experience it and
experiment with it.

The Art of Failure is

"improved" so

that it doesn't

always mean

something more,
something added
on. Maeda's

first law of simplicity is

"Reduce." It's
not necessarily

beneficial to

add technology

features just because we can.

And the features

that we do have

must be organized (Law

2) in a sensible
hierarchy so

users aren't

not less just

for the sake of

less. Skip ahead

to Law 9:

business and technology. We can learn to
simplify without sacrificing
comfort and
meaning, and we can achieve the balance
described in Law
10. This law,
which Maeda
calls "The One,"
tells us:
