The current training evaluation and student measurement literature is reviewed. The emphasis is on studies which have been reported in the last ten years, although earlier studies which have impacted heavily on recent trends are also included. Because of the obvious interaction between both training evaluation and student measurement, on the one hand, and such topics as statistical methods, methods for course development, training methods, learning provide a K-12 sequenced curriculum that is coordinated and articulated to form a total program. The standards address general employability, occupational clusters, job-specific skills, and student leadership skills. In addition, they complement and reinforce the core academic skills that are applicable to each of the career models. The guide's first section, the model program framework, sets forth the broad conceptual components of the program and defines the application of each component. The model curriculum standards section describes in detail the objectives, application, and organization of the model standards. Each standard is organized in a format that includes an initial statement, the standard, and academic core skills enhancement. Standards are provided for children, for explorations, and for specialized fields.
