Excerpt from Cause and Effect in History: A Paper Read Before the "Literary and Scientific Society" Of Hamilton, Ohio In precisely similar manner as the progress, is the ruin of the re publican constitution finally brought about, without shock or violent act. No, the splendid Roman republic, after it has conquered the globe, is thoroughly unsettled in a long, quiet struggle by various deadly conditions, and the way for its fall thereby so imperceptibly prepared that the appealance in conclusion of the one-man Power, of Caesarism, is made to appear inevitable necessity. Even the thought of a; return to the old republican fetm can no more arise. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books. Excerpt from Our Labor Difficulties, the Cause, and the Way Out: Including the Paper on the Displacement of Labor by Improvements in Machinery, by a Committee Appointed by the American Social Science Association The evidence in support of these propositions is more abundant, more indisputable, and more easily reached, than the evidence in support of any other propositions connected with political or social science. A little, only, of this evidence shall I use - barely enough to start the thinking mind upon the right track; but still enough to prove a demonstration. I shall be as brief as possible. Let us examine man's power for production and consumption now as compared with that of our fathers. At the commencement of the present century very little labor saving machinery was in use. Then the farmer's best plow was of wood, iron shod, drawn by from one to four or more yoke of oxen, one man to drive the team, another to hold the plow, and often another to keep it clear. Result, about one and one-half acres plowed per day, by say two men. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
