'I had placed one [owl] on a branch of the mango tree, and was stooping to pick up the other, when I received quite a heavy blow on the back of my head. A second or two later, the mother owl swooped down at Grandfather, but he was agile enough to duck out of its way.' This is a collection of Ruskin Bond's 'small town' stories. Meet Ranji's wonderful bat which is his lucky charm, along with wacky parrots, ostriches, owls and a number of idiosyncratic characters in other stories. Hold your breath as Romi cycles through a raging forest fire and follow the Boy Scouts on delightful adventures. You're dead without dough. Pierre Balmain was not only dead but buried over eighteen feet deep in squalor. He could not afford a clean polo. His hand to mouth small life took his and parents and he swore to make a difference. But he did not reckon the lethal difference he was rushing to grab, until he started his spate of murder. The law of murder says, "murder one and you will certainly murder three to cover up. The money was good and he was up to his neck with indigence, what do you expect him to do? Who couldn't, if the price was one million pounds. Anyone who could do a little murder on the side for such an amount. And that's Balmain's idea of the whole thing. He made the difference in a big way, but such differences never last. Soon he became the hottest bird in the whole world. France, America and Switzerland wanted him for a barbecue if they could set hands on him.

Mr. Greer reviews the very sporadic appearance of new weapons of war during the first three millennia of recorded military history. He contrasts this with the increasing frequency of new weapons in the most recent two centuries and the short time generally taken to develop those later weapons. The increased pace of technology improvement in several important categories of weapons is discussed and the sequence is concluded by a review of an extremely long development period of a recent weapon, the Osprey.
