decide to make things a bit easier. The gruelling months of studying are just the beginning of another journey-adding the worrisome future in store for them. Here's our small way of helping students find their university locally and abroad. This issue is packed with the information for incoming college students who are uncertain of what they want to do after high school. This volume contains the written versions of invited lectures presented at the 29th "Internationale Universitatswochen fuer Kernphysik" in Schladming, Austria, in March 1990. The generous support of our sponsors, the Austrian Ministry of Science and Research, the Government of Styria, and others, made mathematical concepts. Answers to coursebook questions are at the back of the book.

A word of advice? Always expect the unexpected, and never stop trying for the best. Whether you're an A-grade student or an average one, it's never too late - nor too early - to reflect on and start working towards your dreams. The New Year's looming in the distance as well, now; why not, this time around, skip past the cliché resolutions and instead aim to build yourself? To build yourself wherein you are a force to be reckoned with. Where no hurdles will scathe you, no frenemy will bring you down. Because whether you're 17 or 20 or 25 or even 30, there's always, always room to grow. To be better, to do better. And what a better moment to do so

The routine jobs of yesterday are being replaced by technology and/or shipped off-shore. In their place, job categories that require knowledge management, abstract reasoning, and personal services seem to be growing. The modern workplace requires workers to have broad cognitive and affective skills. Often referred to as "21st century skills," these skills include being able to solve complex problems, to think critically about tasks, to effectively communicate with people from a variety of different cultures and using a variety of different techniques, to work in collaboration with others, to adapt to rapidly changing environments and conditions for performing tasks, to effectively manage one's work, and to acquire new skills and information on one's own. The National Research Council (NRC) has convened two prior workshops on the topic of 21st century skills. The first, held in 2007, was designed to examine research on the skills required for the 21st century workplace and the extent to which they are meaningfully different from earlier eras and require corresponding changes in educational experiences. The second workshop, held in 2009, was designed to explore demand for these types of skills, consider intersections between science education reform goals and 21st century skills, examine models of high-quality science instruction that may develop the skills, and consider science teacher readiness for 21st century skills. The third workshop was intended to delve more deeply into the topic of assessment. The goal for this workshop was to capitalize on the prior efforts and explore strategies for assessing the five skills identified earlier. The Committee on the Assessment of 21st Century Skills was asked to organize a workshop that reviewed the assessments and related research for each of the five skills identified at the previous workshops, with special attention to recent developments in technology-enabled assessment of critical thinking and problem-solving skills. In designing the workshop, the committee collapsed the five skills into three broad clusters as shown below: Cognitive skills: nonroutine problem solving, critical thinking, systems thinking Interpersonal skills: complex communication, social skills, team-
