My graduate students like this book's real-world focus on public relations as a strategic function in the C-suite. —Ron Culp, professional director, Public Relations & Advertising graduate program, DePaul University; former Senior Vice President, Chief Communication Officer, Sears Leadership in Communication is a cogent, bright, easily readable definition of what corporate communicators do. More than that, it's an uncommonly careful look at how strategic communication defines, drives, and creates value for a commercial enterprise, its employees, its owners, and those whom they serve. —James S. O'Rourke, IV, PhD, Professor of Management, Mendoza College of Business, University of Notre Dame The quality of leadership in any organization—business, social, military, and government—is enhanced or limited by the quality of its leadership communication. The authors assert that leadership is given force by strategic communication that produces results required in competitive conditions. For the professional in enterprise communication, this brings into focus two key questions: What is the relevance of communication in the leadership process of reaching achievable outcomes (BAOs)? And, how does the primary communication professional function as an expert in competence and success in a leadership position?
