

Essentials Of Gerontological Nursing Adaptation To The Aging Process

Grounded in the author's Functional Consequences Theory for Promoting Wellness in Older Adults, Nursing for Wellness in Older Adults, 10th Edition, instills a functional understanding of both the physiologic and psychosocial aspects of aging, as well as common risk factors, to help students for effective, wellness-oriented gerontological practice in today's changing healthcare environment. This extensively updated edition addresses the latest issues in the care of older adults and ensures an actionable understanding of culturally appropriate care, legal matters, ethics, and more.

Each unit builds the fundamental concepts required to effectively treat older adults and teaches how to help them to reach their highest potential, regardless of their physical disorder.

This book approaches the concept of adjustment to aging and endeavors to build reader understanding of this construct through a critical discussion. Once the reader understands the origins and nature of adjustment to aging, a second innovation encompasses the development of a proposed empirical model of adjustment to aging and the analysis of its components and correlates. Measures to assess adjustment to aging, programs and interventions comprising adjustment to aging and its components and correlates will also be addressed. Another innovation is the multidimensional experience of adjustment to aging from the cultural perspective. Lastly, it addresses areas of future development related to the construct. Future policies and interventions in older populations need to integrate and debate the role of adjustment to aging, and ultimately a variety of different strategies, each with a different set of costs and benefits. Health and social professionals will be at the vanguard of these efforts and community and institutional interventions. Hence, resources and tools to adequately prepare these individuals for the future years are the author's hope that this resource can be valuable for professionals and students working within the field of aging, as they develop new intervention policies encompassing adjustment to aging in the coming years.
