economic convulsions and mistrust of government form the backdrop for my life in New York. From out of nowhere intelligent beings from another dimension contacted me with important news about America. This is my story over several decades and collected from saved journals, notes and recollections. The message for America is contained in this book alongside the catalog of incredible psychic experiences that often saved my life or proved illuminating in some way. They concluded that I might be able to make a difference in a leadership role and insisted I write a book to share my discoveries. If there was ever an unbelievable story to tell, this is the one. I look for the connections to everything else, the whole fabric of existence. My mind was processing so fast everything was a blur; no time for elementary school topics or lessons. As a teenager I eagerly devoured every book I could lay my hands on concerning the occult, superstitions, magic, herbal lore, religious practices, spiritualism, astrology, numerology, psychology, mind reading, extrasensory perception and secret societies. I could have called this book "Report on the New Age" but it might not have had the same broad appeal.

Centering on the theme of university-based teacher education at a time of system change and its connections with broader global political issues, this book investigates the changing nature of initial teacher education (ITE) as it amalgamated into universities in the New Zealand context. The New Zealand government, like many across the world is seeking improvement in education system performance, with a particular interest in meeting the needs of those traditionally disadvantaged through education. As a result, over the last 20 years, most ITE has been relocated into universities and teacher qualifications have changed. Not immune to international discourses about the criticality of the teacher workforce to system performance, Aotearoa New Zealand provides a bounded yet connected case of ITE development and reform. The authors draw from a study of teacher education practice in Aotearoa New Zealand and also look at recent research carried

They highlight the promise of university-based ITE provision, noting areas for development and provide an opportunity to better understand how student teachers within ITE respond to and engage with teacher educators' work in the service of their own learning.

Today, a small but emerging strand of literature has emerged to meet questions concerning time and temporality and its relationship to International Relations head on. This volume provides a platform to continue this work. The chapters in this book address subjects such as identity, terrorism, war, gender relations, global ethics and governance in order to demonstrate how focusing on the temporal aspects of such phenomena can enhance our understanding of the world.
