"The present almost universal employment of standard tests, in the public schools, has made it essential that there should be available for teachers a brief and simple statement of those few elements of statistical method which it is necessary for a teacher to know, if the best use is to be made of the results of the testing. The books on statistics at present available are, for the most part, too elaborate and technical for the needs of the busy teacher. They present many special methods which are rarely if ever used by her, and they usually omit explanation of certain elementary procedures about which some discussion is necessary for those who are attempting to acquaint themselves with statistical methods without the aid of an instructor. It is for such teachers in service that these lessons are especially intended; they enable a teacher to instruct herself in the few essential statistical procedures which every teacher should know. The lessons have also been found very valuable, however, in first courses dealing with mental and educational tests. Methods of tabulating, using norms, and graphing can be really learned only by using them; the chapter on statistical methods in the usual book on tests is of necessity inadequate. These practice exercises will actually establish these skills. It is believed, in short, that for both the teacher who is instructing herself and for the student in a beginning course on tests these lessons will prove of decided helpfulness"--Book. South African universities face major challenges in meeting the needs of their students in the area of academic language and literacy. The dominant medium of instruction in the universities is English and, to a much lesser extent, Afrikaans, but only a minority of the national population are native speakers of these languages. Nine other languages can be media of instruction in schools, which makes the transition to tertiary education difficult enough in itself for students from these schools. The focus of this book is on procedures for assessing the academic language and literacy levels and needs of students, not in order to exclude students from higher education but rather to identify those who would benefit from further development of their ability in order to undertake their degree studies successfully. The volume also aims to bring the innovative solutions designed by South African educators to a wider international audience. This book focuses on how politics shapes the capacity and commitment of elites to tackle the learning crisis in six developing countries. It deploys
