Do you know how to stay healthy in the face of an emergency? Prepare now to keep your immune system on your side, no matter what happens tomorrow. Studies have shown that less than half of Americans are prepared for an emergency, but as the Covid-19 pandemic has demonstrated, we never know what's round the corner: life as we know it can change in just a matter of days. The chances of being stuck in our homes for long periods of time are greater than ever, and when disaster strikes, it can be difficult to get hold of crucial supplies.

Preparation, therefore, is vital, but this means more than stashing toilet rolls and tins of beans. Adequate preparation means stocking up for good health, and not just for basic survival. Do you know what foods to prioritize to protect your immune system in a health crisis? Are you aware of how to store different food items to preserve their nutritional content for months? Is your stock cupboard truly ready if a new health risk emerges tomorrow? These are crucial questions everyone needs to ask themselves in the light of the recent pandemic, but the good news is, getting ahead of the game is easy. Preppers have been evangelizing about food preservation and stockpiling for years. It turns out they were right, and now it's time to learn their secrets. In The Prepper's Pantry: Nutritional Bulk
