A vegan-turned-hunter negotiates the connection between humans and our food sources and continues the dialog begun by Michael Pollan and Barbara Kingsolver. While still in high school, Tovar Cerulli experimented with vegetarianism and by the age of twenty, he was a vegan. Ten years later, in the face of declining health, he would find himself picking up a rifle and heading into the woods. Through his personal quest, Tovar Cerulli bridges disparate worldviews and questions moral certainties, challenging both the behavior of many hunters and the illusion of blamelessness maintained by many vegetarians. In this time of intensifying concern over ecological degradation, how do we make peace with the fact that, even in growing organic vegetables, life is sustained by death? Drawing on personal anecdotes, philosophy, history and religion, Cerulli shows how America ' s overly sanitized habits of consumption and disconnection with our food have resulted in so many of the health and environmental crises we now face.

Booger Bottom, in rural Georgia, has no road signs, no stoplights, no stores. Nobody knows how it got its name, whether from the mythical booger--part wild dog--that is rumored to have roamed there, or from the Feds ("boogers") who raided local moonshine stills during Prohibition. Today Booger Bottom's most famous product is Michael Waddell, one of the world's most accomplished hunters. Growing up in this wild land near the Chattahoochee River, Waddell was blessed with two great gifts: a wonderful father who stoked his passion for hunting, and endless time in which to pursue it. He eventually left the backwoods of Georgia to stalk elk, moose, caribou, wildebeest, eland, and everything in between, from Alaska to Africa. Mixing Waddell's best hunting stories with hilarious anecdotes about the people he's met along the way, Hunting Booger Bottom is a must-read

A good number of misconceptions are currently circulating on the effects of non-ionizing radiations on our health, which can lead to an oversimplification of the issue, to potentially dangerous assumptions or to misleading data analysis. Health effects may be exaggerated, or on the contrary underplayed. The authors of this work (doctors, engineers and researchers) have endeavored to supply validated and easily understandable scientific information on the electromagnetic fields and their biological and health effects. After a general review of the physics of the waves and a presentation of non-ionizing radiations, the authors review the main emission sources encountered in our daily environment. They summarize simply but as accurately as possible the current knowledge on their biological effects. The safety limits recommended by international organizations are presented for the different frequency ranges. This book is intended for doctors, teachers, scientists, students, policy makers and anyone else interested in a deeper understanding of the health effects of electromagnetic fields. Intended to serve a broad readership, everyone will approach it according to their respective level of curiosity and knowledge. It is neither an exhaustive inventory of all the studies made to date, nor a survey text focusing only on some chosen studies. Nor is the objective to present all the sources of non-ionizing radiations. Interested readers will be given the opportunity to broaden their knowledge, also by consulting the selected bibliography presented by the authors at the end of each chapter.

This must-read for lovers of Stephen King's The Shining will leave readers breathless as Seda and her family find themselves at the mercy of a murderer in an isolated and snowbound hotel. Get ready for what Kirkus calls "A bloody, wonderfully creepy scare ride." When her mom inherits an old, crumbling mansion, Seda's almost excited to spend the summer there. The grounds are beautiful and it's fun to explore the sprawling mansion with its creepy rooms and secret passages. Except now her mom wants to renovate, rather than sell the estate—which means they're not going back to the city... or Seda's friends and school. As the days grow shorter, Seda is filled with dread. They're about to be cut off from the outside world, and she's not sure she can handle the solitude or the darkness it brings out in her. Then a group of teens get stranded near the mansion during a blizzard. Seda has no choice but to offer them shelter, even though she knows danger lurks in the dilapidated mansion—and in herself. And as the snow continues to fall, what Seda fears most is about to become her reality...

If we are all powerful creatures blessed with the ability to manifest whatever we want in life, why is it so difficult for some people to do so? Is there anything we have to do to "activate" our latent creative abilities as free-willed beings? In his latest book Your Greatest Gift, bestselling author and spiritual explorer Richard Dotts shares the two chance encounters in his life that led him to the realization of his greatest gift. A gift which not only unlocks all our desired manifestations but also has the power to help us transcend the perceived issues and challenges in our lives, whatever they may be. Many years ago while studying the various spiritual traditions, it suddenly dawned on Richard that tapping into it would be something that anyone can do at will. It should not be something complicated, certainly not something that requires an instruction manual or a PhD to understand. As Richard writes in Your Greatest Gift, "I reasoned that if creation is our birthright, then manifesting should be a fundamental ability that every human being on this planet, regardless of race, background or education can tap into at will. Could it be something so fundamentally simple and obvious that most of us have overlooked?" It wasn't until the most challenging years of his life that pieces of the puzzle began to fall in place.

Richard experienced the power of the greatest gift twice during his most trying times and noticed how his insurmountable problems seemed to straighten themselves out each time without his active intervention. The more Richard studied these two serendipitous episodes in his life, the more he realized something in common but overlooked at their core. He had unknowingly tapped into the greatest gift that unlocks all our desired manifestations. The greatest gift is not what we think it is. It is not about the Law of Attraction, not about having a sense of gratitude, appreciation or love, not about praying, affirmations and certainly not about tapping into the powers of our subconscious mind. All of those are useful tools along our journey, but our greatest gift is something way more fundamental than that. It is a latent ability which all of us possess, but have either forgotten or overlooked along the way. It is an action so simple that we can do it at any time and any place...yet most of us do not do it because we are always looking for external solutions to our "problems" in life. It is an action which does not depend on our intellect. It is something which is referred to over and over again in the Bible and in religious texts across the ages, but a concept that is so misunderstood in our modern society. When you finally understand what the greatest gift is and how it has always been within you, you'll understand how it can be transmuted and applied not only in your own life but also in the lives of others. In Your Greatest Gift, Richard teaches readers how to access this gift for themselves and also how to guide others to their own healing. This book goes beyond the manifestation of physical objects into the realm of effecting spiritual healing and wellness in all areas of our life. In his usual trademark and frank style, Richard explains how this greatest gift can be called upon in times of need and even used to help others through a non-verbal protocol which he shares in the book. When you have experienced the transformational power of this gift for yourself, you too, will recognize it as your greatest gift that unlocks all manifestations.
