Life has never been simple for private investigator Joe Box. A transplanted Kentuckian, Joe has for the past thirty years made an uneasy peace with his Cincinnati home, using his wits, his fists, and his wry sense of humor as he strives to do the best job he can. For at his core, Joe Box is a throwback to an antebellum time: he is a Southern man of honor. But Joe's latest case may be his last. The job seems easy: find an industrialist's missing teenage daughter and bring her home. But for Joe Box, nothing is ever easy. Because in finding her Joe will encounter neo-Nazi geneticists, a subterranean chamber of horrors...and a human killing machine known only as Boneless Chuck. And what starts as a simple disappearance quickly develops into something far worse, something that will not only test Joe's skills and his fragile faith, but his very sanity. So strap down and hang on.

Joe Box has just been dropped into Hell.

Decolonial Perspectives

Everyone knows that polar bears and seals are supposed to be enemies--that polar bears eat seals. But Lars and Robby hatch a plan that lets all the polar bears and seals get along. Full color.

This unique and timely book focuses on research conducted into the experiences of students from rural backgrounds
in South Africa:

foregrounding decolonial perspectives on their negotiation of access and transitions to higher education. This book highlights not only the challenges of coming from a rural background against the historical backdrop of apartheid and ongoing colonialism, but also shows the immense assets that students from rural areas bring into higher education. Through detailed narratives created by student co-researchers, the book charts early experiences in rural communities, negotiations of transitions to university and, in many cases, to urban life and students' subsequent journeys through higher education spaces and curricula. The book will be of significant interest and value to those engaged in rurality research across diverse settings, those interested in the South African higher education context and higher education more widely.

Its innovative,
participatory methodology will be invaluable to researchers seeking to conduct collaborative research that draws on decolonising approaches.
