

Rights Of The Consumer The Straightforward Guide To

Perfect for the layperson, student or professional, this book enables the reader to understand the law as it affects the consumer and gain a clearer idea of rights and responsibilities in this complex field. Now introducing new areas, particularly those which are a result of new legislation, the book covers: Consumer transactions - the Sale of Goods Act 1979; liability for defective goods; consumer credit; the Trade Descriptions Act; unsafe goods; food hygiene and law; price control and consumer remedies.

In 1962, President John F. Kennedy described consumer rights in what came to be known as the Consumer Bill of Rights. Since then, as the world has expanded and changed, so have our rights as consumers. Readers explore food and drug acts that keep us safe and healthy, as well as fair trade and road safety. Sometimes the government sides with consumers. Other times it sides with industries, rolling back regulations that keep us all safe. What rights do we have as consumers? Empower your readers to find the answers.

delivery of goods and services needed by them. One of the disquieting features of the Indian democracy, even after 67 years of Independence, is that an average Indian consumer continues to be in a pitiable condition due to poverty, illiteracy, ignorance and general apathy. Adulterated food, spurious medicines, and sub-standard domestic appliances are pushed over the counter with ease. Glossy and unethical advertisements appear in the print and electronic media. Ironically, it all happens in a country where, in ancient India, Kautilya in his epoch making Arthasashtra had advocated for fixing of responsibility on the State for safeguarding the interests of the consumers. When it became imperative to protect the consumers from adulterated, sub-standard goods and deficient services and also to provide relief by way of compensation, the Consumer Protection Act was enacted in the year 1986. This Act was enacted with the objective to provide better protection to the consumers against the fraudulent practices of suppliers. The Act provides for effective safeguards for consumers against various types of exploitations and unfair dealings, relying on mainly compensatory rather than punitive or preventive approach. The present work explains and examines the rights of the Traditionally, consumer law has played an instrumental role in the EU as a tool for market integration. There are now signs in the EU legal framework and jurisprudence that this may be changing. The Lisbon Treaty contains provisions affecting consumer law and at the same time, it grants binding legal force to the EU Charter which in turn adds a fundamental rights dimension to consumer protection. This evolution, however, is still at an early stage and may be thwarted by conflicting trends. Moreover, it may generate tensions between social objectives and economic goals. This book provides the first comprehensive analysis of these developments, examines new avenues that may be opening for consumer law, focusing on three key areas: financial services, electronic communication and access to justice. Through a systematic analysis of relevant cases, the book traces the development of a human rights dimension in consumer law and details the ramifications of the post-Lisbon legal framework may have on consumer protection and policy. This book concludes by proposing new directions in consumer law, striking a compromise between social and economic the industries of low marketization is insufficient. The consumers are more confident in the information disclosed by the government, while less confident in the information disclosed by the media. The main reasons why it is difficult to protect the right to compensation are the complicated rights protection approach and procedures and long time-consuming. Consumers lack of confidence in the sustainable consumption of natural resources, leading to the obstacles of the right of sustainable consumption. To strengthen the protection of Chinese consumers' rights, we shall focus on strengthening the protection of the right to security in the field of food and drug, establishing "small claims", perfecting "punitive compensation system", creating "consumer public interest litigation system", strengthening the education efforts of the consumer rights knowledge and promoting the socialization development of the consumer protection organizations.
