This book is dedicated to Aristid Lindenmayer on the occasion of his 60th birthday on November 17, 1985. Contributions range from mathematics and theoretical computer science to biology. Aristid Lindenmayer introduced language-theoretic models for developmental biology in 1968. Since then the models have been cus tomarily referred to as L systems. Lindenmayer's invention turned out to be one of the most beautiful examples of interdisciplinary science: work in one area (developmental biology) induces most fruitful ideas in other areas (theory of formal languages and automata, and formal power series). As evident from the articles and references in this book, the in terest in L systems is continuously growing. For newcomers the first contact with L systems usually happens via the most basic class of L systems, namely, DOL systems. Here "0" stands for zero context between developing cells. It has been a major typographical problem that printers are unable to distinguish between 0 (zero) and 0 (oh). Thus, DOL was almost always printed with "oh" rather than "zero", and also pronounced that way. However, this misunderstanding turned out to be very fortunate. The wrong spelling "DOL" of "DOL" could be read in the suggestive way: DO L. Indeed, hundreds of researchers have followed this suggestion. Some of them appear as contributors to this book. Of the many who could not contribute, we in particular regret the absence of A. Ehrenfeucht, G. Herman and H.A. Maarer whose influence in the theory of L systems has been most significant.

In today's very competitive retail environment retailers need to be proactive. They also need to be able to adapt to changing situations and be aware of the latest trends in retailing in order to remain competitive. This second edition focuses on the key elements and components involved in starting a retail business as well as the practical issues that surround retailing. These issues include: The store location; The store front, layout and interior design; Knowing who the customers are and how they buy; The right kinds of products to sell; Selecting suppliers; Managing stock and limiting shrinkage; Setting the correct price; Planning markdowns and price changes; Developing a marketing communication plan; Integrating all of the above into a comprehensive and practical plan. The book places the relevance and importance of these issues in perspective and in a practical way illustrates what retailers can do to improve the success of their businesses. Activities explain certain concepts and South African examples illustrate various principles from a local perspective. Aimed at students of commerce and entrepreneurs who want to start a retail business or who already have a business and want to make it more successful.

An expert communicator, Jack McAfghan writes the memoirs of his four-legged life as a mixed-breed Afghan Hound. From obedience and agility training to hospice work, Jack and his master learn their lessons side by side, inevitably applying what they have learned as their own lives unfold. It is a love story that can be used as an informal study guide for those who are in the process of training a dog, learning to love, or grieving over the loss of a friend.Jack presents with a wise, open and informed mind. He speaks firsthand about the psychological aspects of canine behavior as he opens the reader's mind to the possibilities that exist in life and after death. He reminds us that the way we think can change the course of our lives.This story will touch everyone who has ever loved. It matters not if they have four legs or two. Jack leads us to a higher love as he expands our tolerance and compassion for all of humanity. He extends himself to every creature of the earth, every human on the planet, every spirit in the universe and most of all, to the bona fide Master over all.
