1.1 INTRODUCTION: Hospitals render personalized care and treatment to individual patients as well as meet the health care needs of the patients and their relatives. The work of the hospital cannot be standardized or mechanized. The work schedule cannot be easily anticipated or planned. There can always be an emergency that cannot be deferred. Hence, both functional and moral responsibility, of the hospital towards society is inevitable. Work in hospital requires co-ordination and a very high degree of division of labour that is highly specialized and divided among a wide variety of professionals, semi-professionals and non-professionals requiring diverse skills and talents. Each is interdependent upon the other that requires excellent co-ordination and team effort. There are multiple lines of authority where the physician and the administration coincide. Ninety per cent of the work, which the medical administrators carry out in administration, does not require medical knowledge.

This workbook for Year 4 is part of the whole-school spelling program that helps every student become a good speller. The activities help develop different forms of spelling knowledge that enable spelling to move from the working memory into long-term memory making spelling stick. These forms of knowledge include: kinaesthetic - the physical feeling when saying sounds or writing words; phonological - the sound of spelling; visual - the look and patterns of spelling; morphemic - the meaning

Seven in ten Americans over the age of age of sixty who require medical decisions in the final days of their life lack the capacity to make them. For many of us, our biggest, life-and-death decisions—literally—will therefore be made by someone else. They will decide whether we live or die; between long life and quality of life; whether we receive heroic interventions in our final hours; and whether we die in a hospital or at home. They will determine whether our wishes are honored and choose between fidelity to our interests and what is best for themselves or others. Yet despite their critical role, we know remarkably little about how our loved ones decide for us. Speaking for the Dying tells their story, drawing on daily observations over more than two years in two intensive care units in a diverse urban hospital. From bedsides, hallways, and conference rooms, you will hear, in their own words, how physicians really talk to families and how they respond. You will see how decision makers are selected, the interventions they weigh in on, the information they seek and evaluate, the values and memories they draw on, the criteria they weigh, the outcomes they choose, the conflicts they become embroiled in, and the challenges they face. Observations also provide insight into why some decision makers authorize one aggressive intervention after the next while others do not—even on behalf of patients with similar problems and prospects. And they expose the limited role of advance directives in structuring the process decision makers follow or the outcomes that result. Research has consistently found that choosing life or death for another is one of the most difficult decisions anyone can face, sometimes haunting families for decades. This book shines a bright light on a role few of us will escape and offers steps that patients and loved ones, health care providers, lawyers, and policymakers could undertake before it is too late.

Physicians are increasingly recognizing that helping cancer patients to feel good about themselves and about their appearance can be of vital importance in giving them the emotional support and psychological resilience to survive and recover from the side effects of the disease and its treatment. Aesthetic physicians are in a prime position to help a cancer patient with the side effects and recover lost volume, hydration, and pigmentation in skin, nails, and hair, as well as to advise on nutrition, prostheses, and complementary therapies. This pioneering volume will be an important resource that brings together expertise in this area and the practical details a physician will need. CONTENTS: The oncological patient and
